

Universidad Nebrija is a private and independent university officially accredited by the Spanish Ministry of Education. The University is named after the 15th-Century humanist, Antonio de Nebrija, who published the first grammar book of the Spanish language in 1492.

Universidad Nebrija has welcomed international students from its very inception. Before the university was officially created, the Center for Hispanic Studies Antonio de Nebrija began teaching and researching Spanish as a Foreign Language. Universidad Nebrija was born out of the Center for Hispanic Studies several years later, maintaining an international focus, as the University began to establish partnerships around the world for student and staff exchanges, collaboration in double degrees, research projects, and more.

Universidad Nebrija offers a wide range of undergraduate, graduate, Ph.D. and non-degree programs to more than 10.000 students. True to its international mission, many of Nebrija's degrees are offered with a bilingual option (Spanish and English). Professors include both native English speakers and Spaniards who have experience in multinational firms and institutions, all with years of experience.

The University has received students from all over the world who come to spend part of their academic training at Nebrija in different areas of study. Every effort is made to integrate international students into daily university life.
